For nearly 20 years, I have had the opportunity to work on telecommunications, technology, consumer protection, and national security policy. Every employment experience I have had – which includes over seven years in the private sector and over 11 years on Capitol Hill – involved working on policy issues that are core to the FCC's mission. If confirmed, I look forward to applying the knowledge and skills I have gained throughout my professional career to advance the availability of affordable, high-speed, reliable, and secure communications services across the country.

I wish to serve at the FCC because I love this country and I have seen the transformational impact that an internet connection can have on individuals, families, and communities. If confirmed, my efforts would be dedicated to ensuring that every American has access to the internet and the opportunity to participate in the 21st Century internet economy.

23. What do you believe are your responsibilities, if confirmed, to ensure that the department/agency/commission/corporation has proper management and accounting controls, and what experience do you have in managing a large organization?

If confirmed, my responsibility would be to carry out the FCC's mission by making sure all Americans have access to communications services. As part of this effort, I would focus on promoting competition, innovation, and investment in U.S. communications networks, while protecting consumers and strengthening network security.

Managing an organization in the U.S. government – large or small – requires strong leadership that is guided by advancing the public interest and a commitment to the law. It also involves setting clear goals, and fostering a culture of transparency and accountability. A willingness to engage with stakeholders of all different backgrounds and perspectives is also critical to effective management and making informed decisions. My management and leadership experiences on the Senate Commerce Committee and the Senate Armed Services Committee have helped me to develop skills in each of these areas. They have also helped me find ways to build consensus and identify common ground on policy issues that can be highly technical and politically sensitive in nature. Altogether, my professional background has prepared me to take on more managerial responsibilities at the FCC, if I have the honor of being confirmed.

24. What do you believe to be the top three challenges facing the department/agency/commission/corporation, and why?

The top three challenges facing the FCC include the following:

Achieving universal connectivity. The cornerstone of the FCC's mission is to make communications services available to all Americans. With the future of the Universal Service Fund in question, it is imperative that the FCC work with Congress to restore predictability and sustainability to the FCC's ability to foster and promote the delivery of affordable, high-speed, and reliable internet services to all Americans.

Strengthening network security. Nation states and malicious cyber actors are targeting United States critical infrastructure, including commercial telecommunications networks, to degrade and disrupt America's economic stability and national security. The FCC has a responsibility to work with private industry and its federal partners throughout the U.S. government to strengthen the cyber defenses of telecommunications networks against increasingly sophisticated and hostile cyber threat actors.

Renewing the FCC's spectrum auction authority. Making spectrum available for commercial use is vital to continued innovation and economic prosperity in the United States, as well as America's global leadership in next-generation communications technologies. The ongoing lapse of the FCC's auction authority severely constrains the Commission's ability to meet the growing spectrum demands of the private sector, risking the nation's economic security and technological leadership abroad. The FCC should work with Congress to renew the FCC's auction authority immediately to reach our economic goals in the United States and remain competitive in the global digital economy.
