

Statements of Support for Muhammad Ali American Boxing Revival Act

Dana White – President & CEO, UFC: “Boxing is a sport with an unbelievable history in America, but the system that runs the sport is broken,” said Dana White, President and CEO of UFC. “The Muhammad Ali American Boxing Revival Act gives boxers more opportunities, stronger protections, and a clearer path to compete at the highest level. This legislation creates the kind of structure that can produce more great fights, grow the sport, and build its next generation of stars who can get fans excited about boxing’s future. I want to thank Senators Ted Cruz and Jacky Rosen for working together to move this important legislation forward.”

Lonnie Ali – Interim President & CEO, Muhammad Ali Center: “Muhammad believed boxing could open doors, inspire people, and give athletes a platform far beyond the ring—but he also believed those athletes deserved to be protected and treated fairly,” said Lonnie Ali. “The Muhammad Ali American Boxing Revival Act advances those principles by creating new opportunities for boxers while strengthening health and safety standards and promoting greater fairness throughout the sport. I thank Senators Ted Cruz and Jacky Rosen for their bipartisan leadership in introducing this important legislation and for their commitment to protecting fighters and for helping secure the future of professional boxing in America.”

Nick Kahn – President, WWE and Board Member, TKO Group Holdings: “Boxing has given us some of the greatest moments in sports history. However, for far too long the boxers who make this sport what it is have not had the opportunities or choices they deserve,” said Nick Khan, President of WWE and Board Member of TKO Group Holdings. “The Muhammad Ali American Boxing Revival Act, introduced in the Senate today, delivers this optionality for fighters and includes health, safety and other priorities that boxers like Nico Ali Walsh have been championing. This is a critical step towards a safer, more equitable future for the sport. I want to thank Senators Ted Cruz and Jacky Rosen for their leadership in bringing this bill forward.”
