What They're Saying

United States Olympic & Paralympic Committee (USOPC), National Governing Body Council (NGBC), Team USA Athletes' Commission (AC)

“The revised version of the Protect College Sports Act ensures that higher-resourced NCAA Division I athletic departments — those with annual revenues exceeding $80 million — will maintain at least the same number of roster spots and scholarship opportunities for women's and men's Olympic sports as in the 2024–2025 academic year. We welcome that the agreement provides reasonable flexibility, including transitional protections for mid-sized institutions, while preserving overall participation opportunities.”

American Conference Student-Athlete Advocacy Committee (SAAC)

“College athletics must prioritize educational opportunities and the health and safety of student-athletes. Student-athletes benefit from scholarships, academic support services, medical care, nutrition programs, mental health resources, tutoring, career development programs, and other benefits provided through intercollegiate athletics. Federal legislation should preserve and strengthen these educational benefits to ensure future generations continue to have access to higher education opportunities and careers that may only be accessible to them by participating in college athletics.”

The National Football League Players Association, The National Basketball Players Association

“The National Football League Players Association (NFLPA) and National Basketball Players Association (NBPA) appreciate the bipartisan effort that has gone into developing the Protect College Sports Act from Senators Cruz, Cantwell, Schmitt, and Coons, and believe that the bill includes several important provisions designed to protect college athletes, including guaranteeing NIL rights and providing medical and healthcare benefits. We encourage continued meaningful stakeholder engagement and negotiations to further strengthen the bill as it moves through Congress to ensure college athletes are protected and empowered.”

National Association of Basketball Coaches

“After four years of uncertainty, lawsuits, constant rule changes, and unintended consequences, college athletics needs leadership. While much of the public conversation focuses on financial issues, our greatest concerns are centered on the student-athletes themselves. Throughout our careers, we have always believed that our responsibility is to protect young people, help them grow, and prepare them for success long after their playing careers are over. [W]e must remember that approximately 99 percent of college athletes will never play professional sports. College athletics must continue to be centered on education. Any legislation should encourage academic progress, degree completion, and preparation for life after sports. We have an opportunity to create policies that help student athletes leave college with more than athletic memories; we can help them leave with a degree, a purpose, and a future.”

The National Football League

“By utilizing proven models like the voluntary pooling of media rights under the Sports Broadcasting Act, which supports broad, fan-friendly distribution of NFL games, this legislation will support college athletics and ensure fans will be able to access their favorite games across today's changing media landscape.”

University of Notre Dame

“College athletics remains one of our nation's greatest treasures, providing unparalleled opportunities for personal, academic, and athletic growth. We urge Congress to take advantage of this pivotal moment and pass bipartisan legislation that codifies these vital safeguards, holds bad-faith actors accountable and protects the integrity of the student-athlete experience.”

American Football Coaches Association

“The rapid growth of financial opportunities has exposed significant regulatory gaps. One of those gaps is the lack of a comprehensive national framework governing who may represent college athletes in financial negotiations. This lack of uniform standards for “agents” creates opportunities for abuse and conflicts of interest, while making it more difficult to ensure that student-athletes receive responsible, knowledgeable guidance. Accordingly, we are encouraged by provisions in the legislation that seek to establish greater transparency and accountability for athlete representatives. We are particularly encouraged by the bill’s requirement that an intercollegiate athletic association establish and maintain a national database of registered agents. Providing athletes and families with a reliable, trustworthy source of information regarding who is authorized to represent student-athletes would be a meaningful step forward.”

Washington State University

“The Protecting College Sports Act offers a meaningful path forward by establishing a consistent national framework for NIL and governance, improving protections for student-athletes, and introducing tools to enhance long-term financial sustainability across a broad range of institutions. These reforms are essential to ensuring that universities like WSU can continue to provide exceptional academic and athletic experiences for our students while maintaining competitive balance nationally.”

University of Colorado Boulder

“The Protect College Sports Act helps protect the many Olympic and women’s sport programs that are critical to giving thousands of student-athletes the opportunity to compete and learn the skills of teamwork, leadership, commitment, resilience, and dedication that will serve them the rest of their lives. These programs are core to our CU Boulder identity. We have produced 120 Olympians and protecting that legacy and the opportunities behind it is one of our deepest commitments. This legislation helps ensure that broad-based opportunity endures for the many student-athletes in non-revenue sports yet to come.”

Syracuse University

“Without bold, bipartisan action that brings greater clarity and parity to the future of college athletics – such as what you have proposed in the Protect College Sports Act – Syracuse University's significant contributions to the collegiate athletic landscape are at risk. Only Congress can provide the comprehensive reform needed to stabilize an environment unsettled by increasing legal risk, a failing governance model, and ever-escalating costs of maintaining competitive parity. The legislation you have proposed addresses each of these issues for all of college sports, not just the largest schools, while providing an option to achieve a sustainable revenue model that helps preserve the many programs and opportunities that make college athletics in America so special.”

Major League Baseball

“College baseball has undergone a remarkable transformation over the last several years and has become an increasingly important pathway for future professional baseball players. On issues such as player eligibility, The Protect College Sports Act will help to ensure its continued growth, which is good for all levels of the sport.”

Seattle Seahawks

“The Seattle Seahawks stand with Senator Maria Cantwell and the bipartisan proponents of the Protect College Sports Act. Our focus on growing the game of football – ranging from youth to 12s everywhere – is fundamentally connected to the state of collegiate athletics. We appreciate the Congressional leadership pursuing a stable and broadly beneficial path for the many stakeholders tied to college sports.”

NCAA President

“We must do all we can to safeguard the opportunities of this uniquely American system for the next generation of student-athletes. Every sports league needs rules, and there are certain challenges to NCAA rules that only Congress can address. The bipartisan Protect College Sports Act’s sections bolstering eligibility, transfer and agent policies are needed now to deliver on that obligation.”

The National Basketball Association

“We continue to support a strong college basketball ecosystem, one that is based on clear and reliable standards and that prioritizes both player development and fair competition. The Protect College Sports Act is a positive step and we look forward to continued engagement as the bill advances through the legislative process in the coming months.”

Stanford University

“At Stanford, we believe deeply in the scholar-athlete model, and in preparing our student-athletes for successful lives of citizenship and leadership. The instability you are working to address threatens the academic foundations of college sports. This bill represents an important step toward stability.”
